COURSE DESCRIPTION

Translanguaging as the everyday ways of using language in bilingual communities, in and outside the classrooms, and translanguaging pedagogy will be examined. This course provides an exploration of dynamic bilingualism perspectives that interrogate rigid linguistic borders. It includes discussions on the monoglossic ideological approaches that circulate in schools, power, and privilege of particular speakers, and how they affect teaching practices. It includes research methodologies to collect and analyze empirical data of translanguaging as a practice and pedagogy in the borderland..Copied from UTEP Catalogue

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, students will demonstrate the ability to:

Students will be able to:	Measurements (means of assessment for student learning outcomes listed in first column):
1. Identify and analyze translanguaging practices as the everyday ways of using language in bilingual classrooms/communities.	Observation assignment
2. Describe main theoretical approaches to dynamic bilingualism and research findings about the topic in a variety of settings.	Weekly online discussion board
3. Apply translanguaging pedagogies in lesson design and implementation	Translanguaging as core practice in lesson planning assignment

ASSIGNMENTS

1. Online discussion board (20%)

To help you think about the readings and to facilitate our online discussions, you will participate in 5 weekly online discussions. You will write an initial post responding to a question or a prompt that I posted in the discussion board of the week (200-300 words). Please, make sure to write down the major arguments of the readings when responding to the question or prompt. I will evaluate what you have learned from the week’s readings, so make sure you demonstrate learning in your initial post. Please, write your post clearly, edit, and spell check your work before turning it in.

Then, students will provide feedback to at least two peers on the Blackboard discussion board. Please write at least 100 words for each required reply. In writing your replies, you must use explicitly ideas covered by the assigned readings. I will also evaluate your learning about the week’s theme when I read your replies to your peer’s work.

2. Observations of translanguaging pedagogies or practices (20%)

- You will observe for 2 hours in a classroom setting or 2 hours in an out-of-school setting.
- No IRB required.
- You will write a paper reporting your observation (5-6 pages).

Turn in “Assignments”

The purpose of this assignment is for students to gain hands-on experiences observing and describing translanguaging pedagogies or practices. You will experience observations of translanguaging pedagogies as a research methodology. You are not expected to have specialized preparation to do this assignment. Through this hands-on experience, you will learn to conduct naturalistic observations in the classroom or an out-of-school setting. Because you will not have an approved IRB, this is an educational exercise. You are not to do research, present nor publish any information related to this assignment. This assignment does not constitute research. You will observe bilingual learners in bilingual programs in your community. You may use your own classroom, someone else’s classroom. You may also observe community settings where learning occurs and where translanguaging is likely to occur (for example, after school programs, music/art education programs). If you have any difficulty arranging an observation in a classroom, please, contact me for approval of your out-of-school setting.

On observing and documenting for the observation assignment:

There are certain steps common to most note-taking that may be useful:

1. If possible, tape or video record the observation. Audio/video recording is a basic research tool in language and literacy studies. They will help you remember what you observed.
2. During the observation, record basic details such as date, time, place, general setting, and people involved. A sketch of the setting or seating might be useful here. It is important to capture as much of the context as possible since it helps in the interpretation of observations and conclusions about what behaviors and speech observed mean.
3. Be descriptive rather than evaluative. Your notes and observations are the "raw data", and you should avoid terms that have multiple meanings or that are ambiguous in nature, such as "hostile", "disrespectful", etc. An example: "Most of the people at the meeting were nervous". How many is "most"? How did you know they were "nervous"? What specific behaviors did they engage in that made you reach your conclusions?
4. Take complete notes. Incomplete notes do not allow for correction or reanalysis, nor do they supply enough of the context to know how judgments or conclusions were reached or what caused people in the situation to act how they did.
5. Record direct quotations if you can, and indicate if you are paraphrasing since this may change the meaning intended. Also, since quotations are important part of your "raw data", it is often helpful to include direct quotations in your final write up to document what you are saying.
6. Take notes immediately after leaving the setting. This improves the reliability of what you are seeing. It is often desirable to include pieces of your observations in your writing to illustrate key points.
7. Make your notes focused. Information that is considered noteworthy will depend on the general problem you are looking at, the specific questions you want answered, and your own conceptual framework. Try not to be fragmented and random in your note-taking.
8. While this is not a research project. You must always maintain the confidentiality and trust of those whom you are observing. Make sure you have their permission before you make any observations, recordings, etc., and never divulge names or other identifying information in any written materials you hand in or in class discussions about your project.

Points to consider in making inferences about the observation

- a How are languages used? Who translanguages? When?
- b What tools /artifacts are used to accomplish learning activities? How are tools/artifacts used while translanguaging or to assist translanguaging?
- c How does translanguaging look like?

Content of the written paper "Observation assignment":

This written paper (minimum of 5 pages) should not exceed 6 pages (double-spaced). In terms of structure of your report, the following outline might be helpful:

- Brief introduction (1 paragraph)
- Brief description of setting (1 paragraph)
- Description of learning activity observed, with special attention to translanguaging (3-4 pages).

- Conclusions: What have you learned about translanguaging practices and pedagogies during this observation? Here you should bring at least 3 relevant concepts/ideas from three different course readings (1 page)
- References: Please, add the 3 references cited in your conclusions only.

3. Translanguaging as core practice in lesson planning (20%)

Turn in “Assignments”

You will design a lesson following the guidelines for lesson planning in “The Translanguaging Classroom”. In order to plan the lesson, make sure to use the TEKS, the Common Core Standards or other standards used in your school district. You may design your lesson plan individually, in pairs, or in a group (up to 3 members).

 Please, look for additional instructions and rubric on BlackBoard.

4. Final project: Essay about translanguaging in practice (30%)

Turn in “Assignments”

Essay (5-6 pages, double-spaced, New Times Roman 12): 1) Describe your context. Select a specific educational setting. Select a grade level, educational program, or a bilingual education model. Select a particular larger community and describe it in your essay. Describe in a general way the students you serve (real or imaginary). 2) Using the literature covered in the course, develop an argument that supports using translanguaging pedagogies in the particulate setting selected. When you develop your argument supporting translanguaging, you must use at least 5 main ideas discussed throughout the course. 3) Discuss the challenges that translanguaging pedagogy may present in the particular context you are discussing. Here, you may also discuss some critiques that you have found about the translanguaging theories that resonate with your teaching experience. 4) Finally, please write a brief conclusion.

 Please, look for additional instructions and rubric on BlackBoard.

5. Final Project Multimodal Presentation (10%)

Turn in “Discussion Board”

You will present a preliminary version of your final paper through a PowerPoint multimodal presentation. This PowerPoint should include images and voice or videos. You will find guidelines to create this presentation in your blackboard course.

GRADING SCALE

- A (Exceeds Expectations): 90-100
- B (Meets Expectations): 80-89
- C (Does not meet expectations): 70-79
- F (Fail): 69 or less

An “A” means work that clearly exceeds expectations. Written work falling into this category will demonstrate clarity of purpose, organization, and will communicate its points clearly and effectively. It will also demonstrate engagement with, insights into, and original interpretation of course material.

A “B” means work that meets expectations, meaning that all aspects of the assignment are completed, but it lacks some aspects of “A” work, particularly written work that demonstrates less significant insight into the material, frequent grammatical errors, and/or organizational inconsistencies.

A “C” for written work signifies that one or more aspects of the assignment were omitted, that assignment specifics were not attended to, and/or poorly constructed, unsupported, or inconsistent arguments characterize the work. Work with multiple spelling, grammatical and editing errors also falls into this category.

Below a C is failing a graduate course or a graduate assignment.

COURSE POLICIES

Inclusiveness and equity: Learning happens only when we feel respected as a whole human being. My top priority in our classroom is to cultivate relationships of trust and respect and a sense that we see each other as whole, complex human beings. That you experience this in our classroom is important for the sake of your learning in our course and for the sake of your future students’ learning, so that you feel able to cultivate such relationships with them. To that end, I want you to know that all of you is welcome in our classroom space—all the parts of you as a person are welcome in our discussions, our activities, our assignments, and in our assessments. We are all complex people with a variety of perspectives, experiences, challenges, assets, and resources—our gender identities, our sexual orientations, our religions, our races, our ethnicities, our economic statuses, our immigration statuses, our parenthoods, our veteran statuses, our ages, our languages, our abilities and disabilities. All the parts of you are welcome in our learning community to the extent that you feel comfortable bringing them in. I strive to show respect for the variety and wholeness in each of you, and I expect that each of you show respect for each other as well. If you feel marginalized in our class, and you feel comfortable discussing it, I would like to know so that I can support you, protect you, and make changes that feel more inclusive and equitable. You can also talk with our Department Chair and/or you can report a complaint of discrimination to the University's Equal Opportunity Office, Kelly Hall, Third Floor, 915-747-5662 or eoaa@utep.edu.

Language use: This course is part of our Bilingual Education program. Following recent theoretical developments in the field of Bilingual Education, I encourage you to use your diverse languages and varieties in the course. Many faculty and students at UTEP are bilingual, and we translanguage. I encourage you to use your entire linguistic/semiotic repertoire for learning. Since I am bilingual in Spanish and English, you may turn in your assignments in English or Spanish. If you would like to use another language to write your assignments, please, contact me and we will make it work.

“Netiquette” is the term used to describe the courteous and civil exchange of electronic communications, and will be the guide and expectations of this course. Distance separation between members of this course community does not provide any member the right to be impolite or discourteous to any other member (including the instructor). Members (students and instructor) are expected to desist from personal attacks when disagreeing with others or critiquing their work (“flaming”), and should use emoticons and acronyms to convey emotions. “Capitalized” or “bolded” text imply shouting and will be avoided. Members will “support, not divide”, “critique, not criticize”, “question ideas, not people”, “provide scholarly information, not personal opinions”, “think critically and creatively”, and “communicate assertively while respecting personal boundaries” (Parra & Bovard, 2009).

Attendance and punctuality: This is an intensive 7-week course. Participation in each one of the week's modules/assignments is required. Non-participation is considered an absence. Absences exceeding 1 class meeting may result in a loss of 5 points of your final grade. With 2 absences, in other words, with lack of participation in the online activities scheduled for 2 weeks, the professor reserves the right to drop a student from the class. Please, notify me if you have an emergency. Arrange your schedules so you are prepared to engage in the course fully.

Preparation and Participation: Students are expected to complete all the readings, interpret them, discuss them with your peers, and use them to develop professionally. You are expected to actively participate in discussions and activities. The class is a 3-credit course. I recommend that students plan to spend between 6-9 hours. However, this may vary from week to week. I would like you to take ownership of your own learning. That means that you are responsible for coming to (online or face-to-face) class prepared to explore points and questions with colleagues. Students will benefit from revisiting texts after group discussions. This class will be conducted in primarily a seminar style, even if the classes are online. The expression of diverse viewpoints as well as requests for clarification and elaboration among classmates should be cordial and respectful.

Assignments: Late assignments will NOT be accepted in this course. The assignments in this class require planning. Plan now the time you need to complete the assignments to meet established deadlines. Turn in all assignments through Blackboard. Use New Times Roman p 12 and APA style in your written assignments.

Incomplete: A grade of incomplete will not be given for this course unless there are extenuating circumstances. Please talk to the professor ASAP if such a situation arises. In any case, incompletes will be given only if a student has passed the first half of the course and provides evidence of a documented illness or family crisis, which genuinely precludes successful completion of the course.

Email and Blackboard:

Please check your email and Blackboard at least twice a week. These are my primary means for providing updates to the class. E-mail is one of the most reliable ways to contact me.

UTEP POLICIES

Standards of academic integrity: Students are expected to uphold the highest standards of academic integrity. Any form of scholastic dishonesty is an affront to the pursuit of knowledge and jeopardizes the quality of the degree awarded to all graduates of UTEP. Any student who commits an act of scholastic dishonesty is subject to discipline. Scholastic dishonesty includes, but is not limited to: cheating, plagiarism, collusion [making plans to cheat with another], the submission for credit of any work or materials that are not attributable in whole or in part to another person, taking an examination for another person, any act designed to give unfair advantage to a student or the attempt to commit such acts. Proven violations of the detailed regulations, as printed in the Handbook of Operating Procedures (HOP) and available in the Office of the Dean of Students, may result in sanctions ranging from disciplinary probation, to failing grades on the work in question, to failing grades in the course, to suspension or dismissal among others.

Students with Disabilities statement: If you have or believe you have a disability, you may wish to self-identify. You can do so by providing documentation to the Center for Accommodations and Support Services (CASS) located in Union E Room 106. Students who have been designated as having a disability must reactivate their standing with CASS on a yearly basis. Failure to report to this office will place a student on the inactive list and nullify benefits received. If you have a condition which may affect your ability to exit safely from the premises in an emergency or which may cause an emergency during class, you are encouraged to discuss this in confidence with the instructor and/or the director of CASS. You may call 919-747-5148 for general information about the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA).

Student Conduct and Discipline: All students are expected and required to obey the law and to comply with Regent, Rules, and Regulations (<http://www.utsystem.edu/bor/rules>) with system and University rules, with directives issued by an administrative official in the course of his or her authorized duties and to observe the standards of conduct appropriate for the university.

Equal Opportunity: All students regardless of gender, age, class, race, religion, physical disability, sexual orientation, etc., shall have equal opportunity without harassment in this course. Any problems with or questions related to this can be discussed confidentially with the instructor.
